

Richard Bell websites

Website creation, development, re-development and maintenance

"I have worked in the IT sector for most of my working life and having taken early retirement from office working and commuting, I now work from home developing and supporting websites. Although there are many providers of 'do-it-yourself' website solutions, not everyone has the time or the interest to go down that route. I can provide a personal service developing a site that works for you at a very competitive price. Also, I can maintain websites (i.e. adding news items, updating products and photos etc) if that is a requirement. Having setup a site, I can provide any necessary training and documentation on how to update the content. Finally, for those familiar with website content management systems, I use Wordpress which currently powers approx. 28% of all websites worldwide."

If you want to get in touch to discuss, please email me at richardbellwebsites@gmail.com